BOAT CAPSIZES; THREE MEN ARE DROWNED

Block Island, R. I., July 8.—The drowning of three men in Old Harbor last night was reported today. The victims were James Collins, Joseph Bean and Propellio Aleam, employees on a harbor dredge. They were returning from a short visit when their boat was capsized.

John W. Hunter of Camden, N. J., died after 21 epileptic fits caused by a boy throwing a fire cracker at him on the Fourth.
Four men hired an automobile from a Union Hill, N. J., garage, wrecked the auto and left it in the Hackensack meadows.

LIVELY BREEZE FOR CUP YACHTS TODAY

Newport, July 8.—A tumbling sea and a brisk southwester of some 12 knots strength were the weather conditions under which the American cup class yachts Resolute, Vantile and De-fiance were to compete today in the first of the Newport series of races.
There was weight enough to the wind this morning and plenty of sea to give the yachts a baptism on ploughing, a test to which the owners have been looking forward. A race during yesterday's blow would probably have resulted in a starting of rivets, a loosening of shrouds or the loss of a topmast. All three sloops had covers off their mainmasts and had made up in stops shortly before 8 o'clock.

MANY DIAMOND STARS WERE COAL MINERS IN YOUTHFUL DAYS

(Buffalo Enquirer.)
Pittsburgh, July 8.—Of the two wars, the "Mexican" and the "Rockefeller," the attention and sympathies of the average big player will be found with the struggling miners of the Colorado coal fields.
And well they may, too, for do you know that seven of the greatest baseball players in the game today were at one time coal miners?
We all admit that it is due and generously give great credit to any chap who starts at the bottom and works his way up to the top. So, then, when a man starts at a point several hundred feet below the bottom it does seem that extreme praise is due. That is just what these stars of the game have done.

Mordca Brown—Manager of the St. Louis Cardinals and formerly of the Cubs. For six years "Brownie" worked in the coal fields of Terre Haute, Ind., at least money per month than he now receives in a day of the baseball season.

Honus Wagner—Greatest shortstop of all time. For three years he was a "breaker boy" deep down beneath the mining and smelter town of Carnegie, Pa. "Honus" too, draws more now by many times than he did in his mining days—in fact, he draws more, he modestly admits, than he ever knew "was made" when he punched a time clock and draws his pay in an envelope.

Jake Daubert—Greatest first baseman in the game today, as the critics say. For eight long years he labored in the black and remote interior recesses of the mines at Shamokin, Pa. Jake "cuts regularly" now, at least.

Larry Doyle—Captain of the Giants, National league champions and prominently known as representative of New York town. For five years before Dick Kinsella, scout and owner of the Springfield, threw "T" league team, found Larry and put him on a ball lot (the famous player carried his bread in the dreary coal mines beneath the town of Braes, Ill.).

Bobby Veach—Hard-hitting outfielder of the Detroit Tigers and one of the fastest players on the bases and in the field in the major league company. A St. Louis Louis ball player—Charlie Sile, then manager of "Three" league champions of Peoria, Ill., "found" Veach four years ago when he was working in the coal mines near Harvin, Ill.

Hugh Jennings—The famous "E-yah" Jennings, manager of the Detroit Tigers and a great shortstop in his day. For eight years Jennings was a coal miner in Pittston, Pa.
Ed Walsh—Famous mound artist the Chicago White Sox. In and about the city of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., for several years before he was "discovered" by a scout and dragged into the light of fandom. Walsh, handled a pick in the employ of various coal mining companies.

And there are many more. In major league circles and in the minors there are dozens more with histories just like the man named.

Brown, Wagner, Daubert, Doyle, Jennings, Walsh—each and every one of them credits his success on the ball field to good moral habits in his younger days.
"I never drank until I was well past twenty-one, but I did use tobacco for a few years while a miner," Veach said not long ago. "Swinging the pick makes brown and if a man is built on lines to withstand the hardships of the miner—the foul air, the dark and dampness and all of that—the coal mining business is good exercise for him. It is good physical training."

SPALDING'S BOOK ON HOW TO BECOME AN ATHLETE

How to become an Athlete for beginners, the latest number of the new Primer Series in Spalding's line of publications appears today.

The Primer is edited by James E. Sullivan, Secretary Amateur Athletic Union, and editor of several publications on athletics. Among the subjects covered are Sprinting, Quarter-Mile, Half-Mile, Mile and Long Distance Running, Hurdle Racing, Pole Vaulting, Broad and High Jumping, Shot Putting, and Discus, Hammer, Javelin and Fifty-Six Pound Weight Throwing.

Lawson Robertson, the well-known trainer of the Irish-American A. C. of New York, contributes a chapter on sprinting, middle distance and distance running.
The Athletic Primer will be sent to any address in the United States or Canada, postpaid, upon receipt of price, ten cents by the publishers, American Sports Publishing Company, 21 Warren Street, New York City.

BICYCLISTS MUST OBEY RULES OF ROAD OR PAY A HEAVY FINE

Bicyclists who violate the city traffic ordinances were made an example of by Judge Coughlin at today's city court session when Joseph Smith, a shop hand living at 701 Broad street, was fined $50 and costs for "cutting the corner" at Fairfield avenue and Main street yesterday.
It was testified that he turned into Main street incorrectly and endangered the wall being of a number of people crossing the street. According to the city ordinances, he should have made a wide turn to the right around the traffic policeman instead of trying to cut in close to Read's corner. The arrest was made by Policeman Sherwood.

Judge Coughlin said that bicyclists must obey the rules of the road and traffic regulations as well as those operating other vehicles. He said further that bicyclists who do not are a nuisance to automobiles, drivers of teams as well as those traveling on foot.

PROMINENT BUCKEYE REPUBLICAN IS DEAD

Sandusky, O., July 8.—Heart failure following an illness that extended over several months caused the death here today of John T. Mack, a notable figure in Ohio journalism. Mr. Mack, who was the editor and principal owner of the Sandusky Register, served for a quarter of a century as president of the Ohio Associated Dailies, an organization of newspaper publishers. He was prominent in the councils of the Republican party, though he never sought office for himself. He was 59 years of age.
